Local-first translation for the web

This paragraph explains why a small local model can beat classic machine translation while staying fast. The page keeps its layout.

Links, code and numbers such as 42 stay untouched. Only the text between them is translated by the model.

The scanner left a little noise in the corners, which is normal for an old printed thesis.